Gung Hay Fat Choy! Walnut Elementary DLI Students Ring in Lunar New Year

WALNUT - Over 300 students performed skits, poems, and songs, entirely in Mandarin, during the 6th annual Lunar New Year celebration at Walnut Elementary.

The kindergarten through 5th grade children are part of the school's Dual Language Immersion (DLI) program that offers unique and innovative instruction in both English and Mandarin.

Each grade level took a turn on stage during the energetic program presented for schoolmates on Thursday and for their families on Friday.

"The students put on a spectacular show!" shared teacher Krystin Wong.

Kinder girls sang and danced to "Jasmine Flowers" and boys performed the "Happy New Year" song.

First graders presented "New Year Cake" an interpretive dance to wish higher achievements to the audience.

In Mandarin, "cake" means promotion or achieving heights. As the first day of New Year is also the first day of spring, the song "Walking on Sunshine" was in order, Wong said.

Second graders said they would "have a great attitude" and "never give up" in the new year through the bilingual song "Try Everything."

Third graders presented a 15-day New Year chant incorporating the importance of family reunion, couplets, and the Lantern Festival.

Fourth graders continued to communicate traditions by explaining the importance of the color red, the family feast, and the lion dance. They also performed a rap song, "Report to the New Year!"

Last, but not least, fifth graders performed a skit to the legend of Chinese Valentine's Day. The story explained how Valentine's Day was originated in China.

A finale lion dance was performed by three Walnut Elementary students along with volunteer members of San Gabriel Valley Chinese Cultural Association.

Beginning in Kindergarten, the DLI goal is to give students the opportunity to become bi-literate and bi-cultural. The program is also available for sixth and seventh graders at South Pointe Middle School.

Covina Mayor Jorge Marquez At "Heroes" Children's Art Class

COVINA - "Young Rembrandts serving the East San Gabriel Valley hosted Mayor Jorge Marquez of Covina at Badillo Elementary School on February 14. More than a dozen children attended to celebrate Young Rembrandts' 30th anniversary by honoring hometown heroes like Mayor Marquez. Marquez, who is an alumni of Badillo Elementary, participated in the drawing lesson alongside the students, giving the kids a chance to get to know a local hero in their community.

"It was an honor to have Mayor Marquez in our class, as he is a strong advocate for education and after-school programs," said Richard Gonzales, co-owner of Young Rembrandts serving the East San Gabriel Valley. "Our commitment to the East San Gabriel Valley is embedded in our dedication to its institutions and values, and we wouldn't be able to provide the art classes we do without local heroes working to improve our community every as Mayor for the City of Covina. In addition to celebrating Young Rembrandts' 30th anniversary, the hometown heroes event on February 14 also marked Badillo Elementary's 60th anniversary."

Four Winter Home Projects

Winter is in full swing! The cold weather is not ideal for working on outside home maintenance projects, so focus on sprucing things up indoors. These four winter tune-ups will give your home a pick-me-up just in time for spring.

Revamp the Doors

Looking for an inexpensive way to update your home? Give the doors in your home a makeover! Source unique doorknobs from an antique or hardware store, then paint your doors a different color to give your home a whole new look!

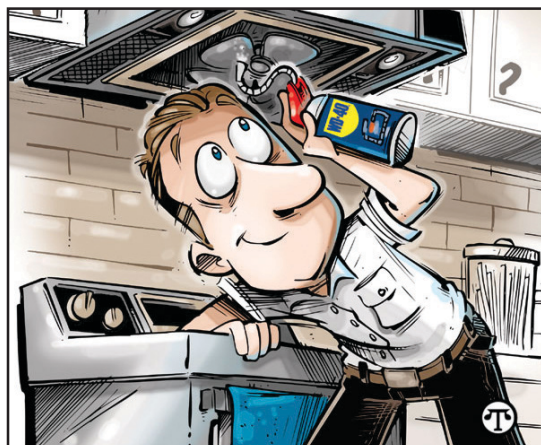

Paint a Room

Freshen up the look of your walls and cabinets. Winter is the perfect time to paint your walls because the dry winter air will help your paint set more quickly than in the humidity of summer. Be sure to crack a window or have proper ventilation.

Lubricate Squeaky Moving Parts

Lubricating moving parts prevents them from wearing out. Easily lubricate moving parts, such as kitchen cabinets or door hinges, wheels on a dishwasher rack, and the exhaust fan over the stove with WD-40 EZ-REACH™. It has an 8-inch flexible straw that bends and keeps its shape to get WD-40® Multi-Use Product into hard-to-reach places.

Replace Furnace Filters and Clean Vents

Lubricate the exhaust fan above the kitchen stove with WD-40 EZ-REACH.

Air filters in your furnace should be replaced once every three months to keep it working properly. Reference the instructions on your HVAC system to help you through the process. Winter is also a good time to vacuum your dryer and kitchen vents to remove lint and grease buildup.

With these four tips, take advantage of the time spent in the warm indoors and spruce up your home to have it in tip-top shape for spring.

City Of Glendora Embarks On A Plan To Prevent Homelessness

GLENDORA - The City of Glendora was recently awarded a grant from Los Angeles County and United Way of Greater Los Angeles' Home for Good Funders to develop a City plan to prevent and address homelessness. The City of Glendora recognizes that homelessness is an issue throughout the County. While the City has a limited number of chronic homeless, we realize that prevention efforts can be enhanced in our community and will go a long way to address homelessness in our community. With a properly developed homelessness plan, the City can strategically connect homeless individuals to needed supportive services and resources with the end goal being moving homeless individuals towards self-sufficiency and a better quality of life.

Glendora is working with the surrounding cities and the region to maximize available resources to ensure the region is working as a team to address homelessness in the San Gabriel Valley.

The City would like to invite Glendora residents to join our mission to end and prevent homelessness in the City. It is obvious by the success story below that a number of residents care about this issue:

Success Story
"I met Mrs. Werner on May 12, 2017 during the Police Department's Open House" stated Police Chief Lisa Rosales. She attended the event and was sitting at our PD Auxiliary booth with her husband Don, who is an Auxiliary member. Mrs. Werner while passing time that day was knitting a scarf. We engaged each other in conversation and I learned that she loves to knit. I shared with her that in my previous city I would purchase scarves, mittens and hats so that officers could hand them out to the homeless and those in need during the cold winter season. Ms. Werner without hesitation told me that she would knit some items for our officers to hand out as well.

About two weeks ago, Mrs. Werner came to the station and brought over twenty individual care packages which contained three knitted items (a hat, a washcloth, and either a scarf or mittens) and a toothbrush, toothpaste, and soap.

My heart was heavy with warmth and love to have a community member take to heart a conversation and with her own two hands make these items with such care. I told Mrs. Werner that she was one of Glendora's amazing "angels."

Input Sessions (Town hall Meetings)

The City will hold 2 input sessions that will be open to the public to assist in writing a successful Homeless Planning Guide. Meetings will be held on Thursday, February 22 at 6:00 p.m. in the City Council Chambers and on Saturday, February 24 at 9:00 a.m. in the Library's Bidwell Forum.

The City is proud to partner with the San Gabriel Valley Council of Governments and its consultant on this important endeavor and look forward to residents input and ideas.

Animal Hero Honored

LOS ANGELES COUNTY - In September 2016, Krisanto Paragas witnessed a dog being thrown 20 feet down a ravine. After the perpetrator left, the brave and compassionate Mr. Paragas immediately climbed down the ravine and rescued the scared, shaking animal.

Shortly thereafter, the suspect, Adrian Spancky Raya, returned to the scene and demanded his dog back from Mr. Paragas. Mr. Paragas refused and warned Mr. Raya that police had been called. At that time, Mr. Raya drove away. Mr. Paragas then took the dog into his home. He reviewed his home surveillance video and gave it to authorities when they arrived, resulting in the defendant's arrest.

Animal Control Officer Armando Ferrufino of the Los Angeles County Department of Animal Care and Control (DACC) investigated this case and turned it over to the District Attorney's office for prosecution. Thanks to Mr. Paragas's compassionate act, Adrian Spancky Raya was convicted of cruelty to an animal and sentenced to two years in state prison.

The dog received medical attention, was fostered and ultimately, adopted into a loving family. DACC is thankful for Mr. Paragas heroic response to a cruel action and Officer Ferrufino was proud to be present to see him receive well-deserved accolades from the District Attorney at the Courageous Citizens Award Ceremony on February 7, 2018.

El Monte Continues San Gabriel Groundwater Basin Cleanup Efforts

EL MONTE - The City of El Monte is continuing to provide access to clean and high-quality drinking water with the opening of the Arden Ground Water Treatment Plant (Plant). City officials invite community members to the dedication of the Plant on February 23 at 10 a.m., at 4131 1/2 Arden Drive, El Monte.

The Plant will be used to treat groundwater from the San Gabriel Basin. The City of El Monte relies on groundwater to fulfill the water needs of its community. The plant has a capacity to treat 750 gallons per minute.

The Plant reflects a significant milestone for the overall cleanup efforts of the San Gabriel Groundwater Basin. The Plant treats groundwater by filtering it through two stages of carbon. This ensures the groundwater is of high-quality.

In addition to protecting this regional supply of water, the Plant supports water conservation efforts. Currently, the water treated by the Plant is being discharged to a storm drain. The City has been working closely with the State's Division of Drinking Water to obtain a permit to allow the use of this supply of water in the City's public water system.

The project is an effort between the City, Work Parties, the U.S Environmental Protection Agency and the California State

Water Resources Control Board Division of Drinking Water. Funds for the Plant were obtained from federal and state water quality grants, as well as from the Project Partners.

Holden Introduces Legislation to Help Protect Children from Lead Poisoning

SACRAMENTO - Assemblyman Chris Holden introduced Assembly Bill 2370 that expands lead testing in drinking water within child care centers. The legislation also encourages greater lead testing of high-risk children, and informs parents about the risks and effects of lead exposure.

"Lead poisoning is a serious threat to children's health," said Assemblymember Chris Holden.

"Increasing lead testing for California's high-risk children is one of the single biggest steps we can take to prevent lead poisoning."

Current law requires drinking water to be tested for lead at K-12 school sites. A 2009 California Environmental Protection Agency report states that very young children absorb about 40 to 50 percent of the ingested lead when drinking contaminated water, while adults absorb between 5-15 percent. Assembly Bill 2370 expands existing law to certified child care centers where over 700,000 children are enrolled.

Almost three-fourths of California's high-risk children -- 1- and 2-year-olds enrolled in the state-run low-income health insurance program -- had not been tested for lead in their blood, according to a recent Environmental Working Group analysis of California's most recent lead testing data.

"Given the well-documented damage that lead inflicts on young children, water served at child care centers should be tested for lead," said Susan Little, California Government Affairs Senior Advocate for Environmental Working Group. "Very young children easily absorb the lead they ingest, so it makes sense that we do all we can to ensure the water and baby formula kids drink is as safe as possible. We applaud Assembly Member Holden's effort to protect these kids."

AB 2370 also encourages greater lead testing to families by requiring child care centers, upon enrolling a child, to request the child's parent or guardian to provide documentation demonstrating the child has received a blood lead screening. If the parent is unable to provide documentation, the care child center would provide the parent with helpful information about the risks and effects of lead exposure, and available providers of blood lead screening tests. Lack of documentation, however would not disqualify the child from enrollment.

Assembly Bill 2370 comes a day after the Assembly Committee on Environmental Safety and Toxic Materials held an Oversight Hearing on the status of testing low-income children for lead exposure where experts agreed that low-income children are at greater risk of lead poisoning.

"TIME JOCKEY" - Arrowhead

By Joe Castillo

Landmark... One of the more interesting sites in the San Bernardino Mountains is a peculiar configuration of a downward pointing arrowhead. The giant image is embedded into the foothills of the mountains providing a shape which has been identified as the symbol of San Bernardino County. Plants of two different colors form the face and background of arrowhead formed primarily from a uniquely shaped block of granite which lies 18 inches below the surface. Only shallow rooted plants can grow over the granite area while deeper rooted and taller plants are able to grow around the edges of the granite formation. The soil surrounding the arrowhead is of a different formation and sustains a dark and thick shrub which covers the remainder of the mountainside. The contrast in color and plants form the image of the arrowhead.

In order to deter erosion and prevent damage from fires, cistus plants have been planted around the perimeter of the arrowhead. The plant was tested to determine its fire resistance and when exposed to flames the seeds from the cistus popped spreading additional seeds to germinate the surrounding area. The original cistus plant did not burn and its density was increased when exposed to an open flame. The tests identified that the Jerusalem native cistus plant was 85% fire-resistant.

In 1953, the San Bernardino Chamber of Commerce initiated a project to protect the geological arrowhead landmark by planting four rows of cistus plants around the edges of the arrowhead. The plants were positioned four feet apart to establish a protective wall in case of a fire. Over the years, foothill fires have burnt much of the brush in the San Bernardino foothills but the cistus plants have warded off any damage to the face of the arrowhead image itself.

At the base of the San Bernardino Mountains a collection of hot springs and warm waters exists. The springs were first used by local Indians but starting in 1863 a succession of generations built hotels and hot springs at the same location. The tip of the hillside arrowhead landmark points downward to the location of the hot springs and was used as a directional guide to those who wished to partake in the relaxing spa and hotels.

In 1870, Dr. David Noble Smith founded the first Arrowhead health resort and spa. In the 1920's, Arrowhead Springs built a large welcome gate with the welcoming image of a Native American Indian mounted on top pointing to the location of the hotel and hot springs. Today, all that remains of the San Bernardino Mountain health and spa resorts is the ageless arrowhead landmark and the nearly 100 year-old Native American Indian statue...

San Dimas HEROES To Host All-New Larger "The Wall That Heals" Exhibit

New Wall replica is 375 feet in length, stands 7.5 feet tall, and travels with new educational exhibits

SAN DIMAS - The Wall That Heals, a replica of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, along with a mobile Education Center, is coming to San Dimas on March 22-25, 2018 at Lone Hill Middle School, 700 S. Lone Hill Ave., and will be open 24 hours a day and is free to the public. The Wall That Heals honors the more than three million Americans who served in the U.S. Armed Forces in the Vietnam War and bears the names of the more than 58,000 men and women who made the ultimate sacrifice in Vietnam.

San Dimas H.E.R.O.E.S. (Helping Establish a Remembrance Of Every Serviceperson) will be among the first to host the new, larger exhibit which includes a three-quarter scale Wall replica that is 375 feet in length and stands 7.5 feet high at its tallest point. With the new replica at this size, visitors will be able to experience The Wall rising above them as they walk towards the apex, a key feature of the design of The Wall in D.C. For the first time in the history of The Wall That Heals, visitors will be able to do name rubbings of individual service member's names on The Wall.

"We are thrilled to share the new The Wall That Heals exhibit with the public this year. Through The Wall That Heals, we are able to return the names home to communities across the country and allow Vietnam veterans and their family members who cannot make it to Washington, D.C. the opportunity to see The Wall. It gives communities a teaching moment for younger generations on why we should honor those who have served and sacrificed so much," said Jim Knotts, president and CEO of VVMF.

The exhibit includes The Wall replica and a mobile Education Center comprised of: digital photo displays of "Hometown Heroes" - service members whose names are on The Wall that list their home of record within the area of a visit; digital photo displays of Vietnam veterans from the local area honored through VVMF's In Memory program which honors veterans who returned home from Vietnam and later died as a result of their service; video displays that teach about the history and impact of The Wall and of the collection of items left at The Wall in D.C.; educational exhibits told through items in the collection; a map of Vietnam and a chronological overview of the Vietnam War.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial is one of the most visited memorials in our nation's capital, with more than 5.2 million visitors each year. However, many Americans have not been able to visit what has become known to many as "The Wall." The Wall That Heals made its debut in 1996 and since then has been on display in nearly 600 U.S. communities in addition to an April 1999 tour of the Four Provinces of Ireland and a visit to Canada in 2005. Last year alone, more than 250,000 people visited The Wall That Heals. Hosting The Wall That Heals provides a community with a multi-day experience that includes an educational experience for local schools and organizations on the history of the Vietnam era and The Wall.

VVMF coordinates local stops of The Wall That Heals and the accompanying mobile Education Center. The current schedule and more information can be found at: www.thewallthatheals.org. The 2018 national The Wall That Heals tour is hauled through a partnership with the Truckload Carriers Association (TCA) and the trucking industry and generously sponsored by USAA, FedEx and GEICO. Local sponsors include the City of San Dimas, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kathryn Barger, San Dimas Community Hospital, Glendora WalMart and ADP.

About The Wall replica The three-quarter scale Wall replica is 375 feet in length and stands 7.5 feet high at its tallest point. Like the original Memorial, The Wall That Heals is erected in a chevron-shape and for the first time in the history of The Wall That Heals, visitors will be able to do name rubbings of individual service member's names on The Wall.

The replica is constructed of Avonite, a synthetic granite, and its 144 individual panels are supported by an aluminum frame. Machine engraving of the more than 58,000 names along with modern LED lighting provide better readability of The Wall day and night.

The names on The Wall That Heals replicate the names on The Wall in Washington, D.C. As on The Wall, the names are listed alphabetically by day of casualty. Beginning at the center/apex, the names start on the East Wall (right-hand side) working their way out to the end of that wing, picking up again at the far end of the West Wall (left-hand side) and working their way back in to the center/apex.

A new 53-foot trailer transports The Wall That Heals from community to community. When parked, the trailer opens with exhibits built into its sides, allowing it to serve as a mobile Education Center. This unique educational experience gives visitors a better understanding of the legacy of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and the collection of items left at The Wall.

The mobile Education Center displays includes: digital photo displays of "Hometown Heroes" - service members whose names are on The Wall that list their home of record within the area of a visit; digital photo displays of Vietnam veterans from the local area honored through VVMF's In Memory program which honors veterans who returned home from Vietnam and later died as a result of their service; video displays that teach about the history and impact of The Wall and of the collection of items left at The Wall in D.C.; educational exhibits told through items in the collection; a map of Vietnam and a chronological overview of the Vietnam War.

The Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund (VVMF) is the nonprofit organization that built the Vietnam Veterans Memorial (The Wall) in Washington, D.C. in 1982. VVMF is dedicated to honoring and preserving the legacy of service in America and educating all generations about the impact of the Vietnam War and era through programs, ceremonies and education materials.

"Young Man, That Is Not Enough!"

A couple of weeks back in a discussion about America's heroes, I suggested that my readers might profit by passing the magnet of memory over their lives and seeing what heroes might be lifted out. A few days after that column was published I was reviewing a half dozen recent pieces, and guess what? I found that I was taking my own advice and passing the magnet of memory over my own life. As I sorted through my memories, for today's column I decided to focus on a specific year I recall as being particularly rich in persons and events.

So here goes. The year 1967—a half-century ago—heralded a dramatic, tension filled and emotionally overwhelming era in American history. In August of that year, I concluded my, ministry at a fine suburban church in northern Virginia just a couple of miles from the Pentagon, and headed for what was—and still is—my denomination's bell-weather radical congregation at the University of Chicago. That year was to see an eruption of protests against America's Viet Nam war. What I didn't fully realize was that this congregation was to be a major locus of the nation's radical anti-war activities, and I would quickly find myself at the center of the storm. But that is a story for another time. This week I want to describe just one aspect of the events leading to my participation in the protests.

Like all pastors, my training prompted me to visit in the homes of every member of my new charge as soon as possible. Given the diminished nature of this troubled church, it did not appear to be a particularly onerous task, and I quickly set about it. On the church roles was "Annetta Diekmann," a single 90 year old semi-shut-in. Her address was an apartment in the Kenwood community south of the Chicago's downtown Loop. As I approached her neighborhood I realized two things: 1. The area was entirely African American. 2. It was probably controlled by the Blackstone Rangers, Chicago's largest most violent street gang. What had I gotten myself into?

I approached Miss Diekmann's apartment building with considerable anxiety. In a few minutes she was able to buzz me upstairs, and greeted me at her apartment door. After the ceremonial tea and cookies, my goal was to discover what I could about this aging woman—among other things about her decision to live in this unsafe neighborhood (was my racism showing?) Presently she stopped me and said that there was a question she needed to ask. I replied that I would welcome it, and sat back waiting for whatever she had on her mind.

"Young man," she said—I was just 30—"what are you doing to end the war?" I was completely caught off guard. What had I done? I had written a couple of letters, and had attempted to be a good pastor to the senior military officers in my former congregation, while being careful lest I appear to be un-American. After my slim recital, Miss Diekmann and I both just sat silently for what seemed like an hour, but was probably less than a minute. Miss Diekmann finally broke the silence. "Young man, that is not very much, and certainly not what I expect from my pastor." I stumbled around for something else to say, and took my leave.

Annetta Diekmann had spent her life as a labor organizer basically in the employ of the YWCA. If she was a card carrying member of the communist party, that was never made clear, but in subsequent visits it became obvious in both our conversations and the literature strewn around her apartment, that she lived on the far left fringe of the political world.

The visit I just described was the first in a long series of conversations in which she prodded me to do far more if I hoped to help end the war. Annetta Diekmann was not only a hero, but a saint, and over the next seven years as I entered the sanctuary of University Church, and looked up at the vaulted ceiling, there would be Annetta Diekmann in one of the niches, and I could hear her saying, "Young man, that is not very much, and certainly not what I expect from my pastor."

How Do We Combat Mass Killings?

The tragic murder of staff and students at the Florida High School is being labeled the new "St. Valentine's Day Massacre."

Nikolas Cruz, 19, carried a duffel bag and backpack, where he hid his weapons and ammunition. He went to Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland, Fla. in an Uber on Wednesday and pulled out a semiautomatic AR-15 rifle and just started killing people. He shot students and staff on the school grounds, in the hallways, and in a number of classrooms. This included two teachers and a security guard. He killed 17 people and wounded more than a dozen other people before blending into the crowd of students running from the school. He was later arrested and charged with the 17 murders.

How do we prevent mass murders like this? People scream for gun control, they blame Trump, they blame anybody and everybody, but they don't blame society as it is today. There are more people out there like Cruz, and this certainly isn't the last mass shooting that will take place. There will be more.

In my opinion, gun control is not the answer. The bad guys will always get a weapon no matter what the laws are. I do not know if the security guard that was killed was armed or not, but my guess is he was not. Across the nation, some teachers have petitioned to carry firearms for the protection of their students, staff and themselves. Some schools have allowed this to happen. Of course, there is a background check and proper training for these teachers. There are also gun lockboxes that requires the owner's hand to be scanned and identified to unlock that box so they can retrieve their firearm. I saw demonstration of this and it was impressive. A teacher could have this bolted into a drawer or cabinet and if the time comes, and hopefully not, they can retrieve the weapon and neutralize the shooter if need be.

Our schools are an easy target however they are not the only target. We have imported terrorists

George Ogden

That's just the way it is!

and homegrown terrorists who thrive on the fact of killing innocent people are the right thing to do. Those countries that allow their citizens to carry firearms have the lowest crime rates in the world. In those countries that have taken away the firearms from their citizens have the highest crime rate in the world and mostly at the hands of armed criminals. Firearms are not always the weapon of choice for mass killings. A couple of years ago in China, five terrorists went on a stabbing spree and killed dozens and put over 130 people in the hospital before they were neutralized. Four were killed and one was captured. If any of these people had been armed, a good chance the death toll would've dropped dramatically, and the suspects taken down quickly.

Taking away guns from citizens is not the answer. It will simply open the door for more crime, mainly home invasion crimes. However, I will go on record saying that I do not need any kind of an assault weapon, even as a toy. The weapon used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre of late, was an AR 15 which is not an assault weapon. It resembles an M-16 which is an automatic weapon. The AR 15 is not.

I always felt that if the citizens want to have automatic weapons or assault type weapons, who am I to say "no"? If we were having some type of riot or something of that nature, and the guy next door had automatic weapons, I would have to say at that time he would be my best friend.

I really don't know if we should have an arsenal of automatic weapons in our home. One possible idea would be if you want to own some of these, have at it. But maybe we could have lockers at the police station that you can store your weapons at where they would be protected at all times for minimum charge of five dollars a month or something, and also to have them available for police officers to use in case they were needed. So when you feel like going out to the desert blowing off $500 worth of ammunition in an hour, swing by the police station and pick up your weapons, and when you're done bring them back. You would not have to worry about getting your home burglarized and your weapons taken that could be used in crimes.

There are gun clubs that have all types of weapons that you can use for a fee and shoot up as much ammunition as you want as long as you pay for. This includes the miniguns, 50 calibers and much more. This would save you a lot of money in owning something like this and trying to keep it protected at your home.

As for trying to protect ourselves from mass killers in restaurants, schools, churches and any other places where people congregate, I would venture to say that if the majority of the people that were in that crowd were either openly carrying or carrying concealed weapons would be a major deterrent. We would no longer have unarmed innocent civilians without the opportunity of shooting back and protecting themselves and each other. I am all for our teachers who pass the psychological tests, background and gun training to be allowed to carry firearms. I'm all for paying for armed security in our schools and other public areas for the protection of our citizens. Our government presently wastes a lot of money on stupid crap such as paying big bucks for getting those "What If" reports that they pay for those so-called professional analyst.

The only way we can protect ourselves is if we are the ones who protect ourselves. Kill them, before they kill us.

Market Corrections Are Good!

No sectors were spared when the correction hit recently, which is a good thing. This is a broad "flush-out" of the system. Profit taking is necessary and helps reset the market into a base-building area which will springboard it higher. It's worth noting that even though yields went down along with equities (which is unusual), rate-sensitive sectors still outperformed. Telecom, Utilities, and Real Estate were the top performing sectors, as they declined the least. On the other hand, energy fell like a rock, having the weakest fundamentals.

We can expect this sell-off to be short lived. Why? The stock market has been like a hungry giant, in the sense that its appetite for higher prices has been fueled by solid fundamentals. Sales and earnings growth are continually exceeding expectations and we are on pace for one of the best earnings quarters ever. But every meteoric rise needs a break - a chance to blow off steam, rest, and reset for the next leg higher. The bottom line here is that we should not lose focus or get frazzled.

The best way to take advantage of market cycles is to own the best stocks - those with growing earnings and sales and solid technicals. These are the stocks that will bounce the highest when a relief rally comes, while the weak ones may continue to get "tested." This is a buying opportunity, so when looking over your list of stocks that were "too expensive" to own, a flash "sale" just arrived. When you have your eye on a new car and suddenly there's a manager's sale, you don't ask, "What's wrong with the car?" I don't want the car anymore." You see value. The same should be applied to stocks. Fundamentals certainly have not changed from one week to another. The environment is great, other than that the market overheated and was getting ahead of itself. This "reset" is just a needed pause to refresh.

Growth cycles everywhere in the universe follow the same pattern of bursts of progress with intermittent resets and rests. This reset may last a week or longer but either way, this correction will be long forgotten before next summer when we will likely be higher, and by this fall it will seem insignificant.

Now for the good news. Rates are expected to rise when the economy is getting out of first gear, and there is rising speculation that first-quarter GDP will top 3.0% with the fourth quarter seeing a sharp upward revision, as the initial 2.6% GDP reading for Q4 2017 was unduly weighed down by trade deficits.

It is interesting to note that companies are beating an even higher bar for estimates now relative to expectations at the start of the quarter, as revenue estimates in aggregate actually increased during the fourth quarter. On September 30, the estimated revenue growth rate for Q4 was 5.7%. By December 31, it was 6.7%. Because of the number and magnitude of these upside surprises (and continued upward revisions to revenue estimates after the end of the quarter), the blended revenue growth rate for the quarter has increased to 7.0% today.

The data show that the economy is accelerating and current earnings estimates are too low. This is all great news for the stock market, as it should dispel the fear of the market trading at too lofty a P/E ratio. The market is currently trading at a forward P/E of 18x, but if future revenue growth for the S&P is being adjusted higher to the tune of 7%-8% going forward, then the market is not expensive because earnings growth will also accelerate.

In essence, look for the Fed to raise the Fed Funds Rate in March to 1.75% from 1.50% and then again in May or June if first-quarter growth is gangbusters, meaning north of 4.0%. Currently, there is a 76.1% probability the Fed raises in March and that number is likely to climb into the 90s by the end of February.

What we need to know most as investors is that the present rally is defined by outstanding top and bottom line growth for corporations and that normalizing rates a little more ahead of schedule as an offset to the power of tax reform is a very good thing for sustaining the secular bull trend.

Your Money - Ask Julia

I recently started a sole-proprietor business. How can I find out what my tax deductions I might be able to take?

Go online to www.irs.gov, search, download, and print: Schedule C and the Instructions for Schedule C. These two pieces are packed with information on what are allowable tax deductions for non-incorporated businesses. The new tax law might affect your business deductions for expenses in 2018. One example: with the previous law you (as sole-proprietor) would have had to pay individual income taxes on your business income (aka "pass-through business taxes.") Under the new law, business owners can take a 20-percent deduction on their pass-through business income (earning income up to $157,500 for 'single' filer; up to $315,000 for 'married filing jointly').

I'll be turning 70 1/2 next year. If I buy an annuity this year, will I have to pay surrender fees or penalties on money taken out to fulfill the RMD rules?

Insurance companies, which offer annuities, allow you to put your money into an annuity, and waive surrender fees on any amounts taken to fulfill the Required Minimum Distribution rules.

Should we put our annuities into the name of our trust?

Beneficiaries receive payout from an annuity outside of a trust faster than they would with an annuity within a trust. The most common reason for establishing a trust is to avoid probate. Because beneficiaries are named within the annuity policy, probate is already avoided. Keep in mind that it can take much longer for a trust to be read and for those instructions to be implemented. Quicker access to funds from annuities and life insurance can enable beneficiaries to pay bills and taxes in a much timelier manner.

Is whole-life insurance the only kind of life insurance that builds a cash account?

No, there's also universal life, variable universal life, and equity-indexed universal life. In my opinion, the best out there is Equity Indexed Universal Life. This is life insurance with an underlying savings account that is not in the stock market. You are given the choice annually to allocate part of your premium to a fixed return premium, or to several other avenues with higher potential gains without risk of loss. (based on the strength of the issuing insurance company)

Are there any low-downpayment home loans available nowadays?

Yes! There are a few, 1-percent, 3-percent, 3.5-percent, and 5-percent. With the lowest, you put 1-percent down and the wholesale lender adds 2-percent (up to $5,000) so your downpayment is 3-percent. (There are other guidelines.) And, if you qualify to pay a little higher interest rate, you might utilize a feature called 'lender-paid' mortgage insurance. Some loans allow a 'gift' from a very close relative to help. If you are a Veteran, or are serving active duty in the military, there is even a 'no-downpayment and no mortgage insurance' loan available.

THE CAR GURU

WHAT YOU "AUTO" KNOW

By Gene Morrill - Certified Automotive Specialists

The Life Of A Car Battery

The two main reasons for shortened battery life are:

- Excessive heat - Heat causes battery fluid to evaporate, damaging the internal structure of the battery.
- Overcharging - A malfunctioning component in the charging system, usually the voltage regulator, allows too high a charging rate, resulting in a slow battery death.

To get the most out of your battery:

- Have your battery and its connections checked at every oil change

- Be sure the electrical system is charging at the correct rate. Overcharging can damage a battery as quickly as undercharging.

- Always have the battery replaced with one that's rated at least as high as the one originally specified.

- Keep the top of the battery clean. Dirt becomes a conductor, which drains battery power. Further, as corrosion accumulates on battery terminals it becomes an insulator, inhibiting current flow.

Batteries do not always give warning signs before they fail. If your battery is more than three years old, it is probably wise to have it replaced.

Your car care provider can determine the health of your battery so you know how much life it has left.

What You Should Know About Colon Cancer Screening

Colon cancer affects both men and women equally. The lifetime risk of developing colon cancer is 6%. That number increases to 9% with a first degree relative, and goes higher with multiple relatives with colon or ovarian cancer. Despite the recommendation by every doctor and government agency that every person over the age of 50 undergo screening, only slightly less than 40% have complied.

What is the best way to detect Colon Cancer?

Based on current literature, the examination most likely to detect colon cancer, or its precursor, a colon polyp, is fiber-optic colonoscopy. This test will detect not only 97 to 98% of these lesions, but also allows the simultaneous performance of a biopsy or removal of an entire polyp. This examination is the gold standard against which all others are measured. Colonoscopy requires a one day preparation involving some type of oral laxative, and is performed with intravenous sedation so patients should not experience any discomfort during the exam. As this is not an operation, patients should not expect significant discomfort once the sedation has worn off. The expected complication rate is very low, reported to be less than one in a 1000, with the number even lower in highly experienced hands.

George Ferenczi, M.D., M.B.A.

Are there any other alternatives?

Virtual colonoscopy is an available alternative. However, except in a few selected academic centers, the reliability of this examination does not yet approach that of fiber-optic colonoscopy. It also carries the disadvantages of requiring a cleansing bowel preparation essentially the same as for fiber-optic colonoscopy, radiation exposure, and the need for a follow-up colonoscopy to deal with any suspicious lesions that may be found.

What is a Barium Enema?

Barium enema involves filling the colon with contrast material, then the taking of X-ray pictures of its outline. This exam, which is performed without sedation, also requires a laxative prep and has a 10 to 15% lower reliability for identifying pathology as compared to colonoscopy. Any abnormality requires a subsequent colonoscopy.

Flexible sigmoidoscopy visualizes only the lower third of the colon, requires a bowel prep, and is done without sedation.

Isn't checking stools for blood enough?

Checking stools for the presence of occult blood in order to detect cancer is easy and inexpensive. However, there are many false positive tests, and more importantly, up to 50% false negatives. The new DNA based tests can miss 8% of existing cancers, 50+ percent of polyps, and have 13% false positives. They are expensive, and not covered by all insurances. Any positive test requires colonoscopy.

What are the symptoms for Colon Cancer?

Unfortunately, polyps (known to be the precursors to 99% of colon cancers) and even early cancers do not cause any symptoms. It isn't until the cancer has grown that people begin to experience bleeding, pain, weight loss, or a change in their bowel habits. Sadly, by the time patients present with symptoms, the disease has often progressed to being only treatable rather than curable. Discovered early, colon cancers are almost uniformly curable, and in removing polyps, are preventable.

If you do not have a family history of colon cancer, and no polyps are found during your exam, based on currently published recommendations, you do not require another colonoscopy for 10 years. If you have a family history of colon cancer or have a history of prior colon polyps, you should have a repeat examination in five years. If your polyp could not be completely removed, or had some unusual pathologic features, more frequent examination may be required.
